excerpt from the early dynasties of sumer and akkad as a result of this rearrangement it has appeared that the total gap between the end of 1 vi and the beginning of 1 vii is about 30 lines and might be rather more the next space which extends from the middle of the agade kingdom to the beginning of gutium may be similarly filled from the contents of 1088 57 it would be tedious to repeat the actual process here and in this case the result may be barely stated this gap appears to comprise some 36 lines the beginning of 1 ix contains the summary of the gutium dynasty and here as we do not possess the missing portions no very precise reckoning is possible but 1 enumerated 21 kings in this dynasty and four are preserved in col viii this would leave 17 more to be entered and allowing two lines to each king we might arrive at a rough total of 34 lines missing between 1 viii ix the result of these calculations is that we have three spaces which contained approximately 30 36 and 34 lines from which the average of 33 or 34 is readily obtained and while there is of course no mathematical exactitude about these figures they may still be sufficient to constitute a working formula it should perhaps be added that in each case what seems to be the smallest possible number of lines has been allowed and that the average therefore represents a minimum computation about the publisher forgotten books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books find more at forgottenbooks.com this book is a reproduction of an important historical work forgotten books uses state of the art technology to digitally reconstruct the work preserving the original format whilst repairing imperfections present in the aged copy in rare cases an imperfection in the original such as a blemish or missing page may be replicated in our edition we do however repair the vast majority of imperfections successfully any imperfections that remain are intentionally left to preserve the state of such historical works
