despite rich archives of work on race and the global economy most notably by scholars of colour and global south intellectuals the discipline of political economy has largely avoided an honest confrontation with how race works within the domains it studies not least within markets by way of corrective this book draws together scholarship on the material function of race at various scales in the global political economy the collective provocation of the contributors to this volume is that race has been integral to the formation of capitalism as extensively laid out by the racial capitalism literature and takes on new forms in the novel market spaces of neoliberalism the chapters within this volume also reinforce that the current political conjuncture marked by the ascension of neo fascist power cannot be defined by an exceptional intrusion of racism nor can its racism be dismissed as epiphenomenal. Raced markets will be of great value to scholars, students, and researchers interested in political economy and racial capitalism, as well as those willing to explore how race takes on new forms in the novel market spaces of contemporary neoliberalism. The chapters in this book were originally published as a special issue of the new political economy.

Women have made huge advances relative to men in the labor force, occupational status, and educational attainment, but women continue to earn less than men. While the gender pay gap has narrowed, a substantial gap remains. Sex discrimination in the labor market examines sources of this pay disparity and the factors that contribute to this gap. Whether sex discrimination plays a role in the gender pay gap is a topic of considerable debate. Many researchers question the role of discrimination and attribute the residual pay gap to gender differences in preferences, especially with respect to balancing work with family responsibilities. Sex discrimination in the labor market shows that sex discrimination contributes to the unexplained gender pay gap, which is consistent with high-profile sex discrimination litigation suggesting continuing bias in the labor market on the basis of sex.
