a thought provoking examination of how explanations of social and moral development inform our understandings of morality and culture a common theme in the latter part of the twentieth century has been to lament the moral state of american society and the decline of morality among youth a sharp turn toward an extreme form of individualism and a lack of concern for community involvement and civic participation are often blamed for the moral crisis turiel challenges these views drawing on a large body of research from developmental psychology anthropology sociology as well as social events political movements and journalistic accounts of social and political struggles turiel shows that generation after generation has lamented the decline of society and blamed young people using historical accounts he persuasively argues that such characterizations of moral decline entail stereotyping nostalgia for times past and a failure to recognize the moral viewpoint of those who challenge traditions

this book presents the results of an experiment in interdisciplinary collaboration to clarify theories of morality and anthropology and philosophy showing how each may be enriched by borrowing from the other pooling the resources and methods of their respective fields anthropology and philosophy may and abraham edel examine the wide range of moral differences in the world to establish coordinates for the more systematic mapping of particular moralities to explore more explicitly the relations of morality to cultural patterns and social processes and to see how philosophic issues of ethical theory become refined and reformulated when their cultural content is made manifest the book contains an implicit suggestion that the anthropologist should focus on morality as an independent area of study and that the philosopher should stop treating morality in isolation anthropology tends to include morality as an incidental part of other inquiries philosophy on the other hand tends to cut morality off from the framework of psychological and cultural processes the result is a kind of deadlock in ethical theory the eds observe that to develop a working concept of morality at least as well developed as that furnished for religion anthropology can benefit from philosophic methods of analyzing concepts and from philosophical ways of conceptualizing problems of ethical theory on the other hand philosophy can use the methods of anthropology to approach morality in more meaningful terms this study is not addressed only to professionals its aim rather is to provide an orientation to morality itself in a world in which human problems are becoming extremely complex and have to be confronted directly as moral this book has two principal themes first it is addressed to those who work for corporations many christians have been taught to feel at best faint disdain for corporations and those who manage them in contrast novak knows that many most business men and women are ethical people who yearn for moral guidance and advice consequently theology tackles a basic moral question can a christian work for a corporation novak s answer yes yet novak recognized that anyone who purported to think about practical business ethics needed to understand the predominant form of business organization the public corporation much of theology is thus devoted to an analysis of the corporation is the firm s structure as a bureaucratic hierarchy consistent with church teaching on human dignity what social responsibility if any does the corporation have and so forth thinking about those questions naturally lead novak to broader issues such as the consistency of capitalism with church teachings on wealth in theology therefore novak began working out the line of argument that was later developed more fully in his magisterial the spirit of democratic capitalism novak recognizes that church teaching has been hostile to capitalism as with much else of modernity yet novak contends that arguments against capitalism serve mainly to give aid and comfort to the leviathan state in the most controversial portions of theology novak attributes christian opposition to capitalism to two main sources ignorance and antique world views church leaders and theologians tend to be poorly trained in economics and inexperienced with the world of economic reality many believers again this is especially true of theologians are likely to inherit either a pre capitalist or a frankly socialist set of ideals about political economy as a result church leaders are more likely to err in this territory i e economic justice than in most others p 59 to be clear novak does not believe that faith should be subordinated to capitalism to the contrary he recognizes that the divine plan was that we should enjoy the fruits of the earth and of our own industry he simply contends that capitalism is the best way fallen humans have yet devised to obey the biblical command that we are to be stewards of god's world novak never loses sight of the basic proposition that it was equally the divine plan that god should be worshiped obeyed and feared the fear of the lord he would argue is the beginning of capitalist wisdom just as it is of any other kind of wisdom not surprisingly therefore novak's analysis has begun to impact the way the church thinks about capitalism pope john paul ii's most recent encyclicals on work and the economy for example such as centesimus annus contain obvious marks of novak's influence
