considers how they interpret, shape and negotiate religious identities, traditions and authority on an individual and collective level with a particular focus on the experiences of second generation Sikhs as they interact with various people in different social fields and cultural contexts. The book is constructed around three parts: family and home, public display and gender, and reflexivity and translations. This is the first work to address the legacy of Wilfred Cantwell Smith (1916–2000) whose intellectual and institutional contributions helped shape the field of religious studies in the latter half of the twentieth century. As a young scholar, Smith taught Indian and Islamic history in Lahore for several years and witnessed the Partition of India upon his return to North America. He obtained his PhD at Princeton University before embarking upon a long and distinguished career. He founded the Institute of Islamic Studies at McGill University and served as director of the Center for the Study of World Religions at Harvard University. Smith emphasized the place of the scholarly study of Islam in the Western academy long before Islam occupied its current position at the center of global politics. Challenged the notion of monolithic world religions and argued for the importance of dialogical processes and a personalist approach to the study of religion. Contributors to this volume, many of whom were Smith's students, provide a wide-ranging exploration of his influence and legacy.

This collection of essays explores how women from a variety of religious and cultural communities have contributed to the richly textured pluralistic society of Canada. Focusing on women's religiosity, it examines the ways in which they have carried and conserved and brought forward and transformed their cultures old and new in modern Canada. Each essay explores the ways in which the religiosities of women serve as locations for both the assertion and the refashioning of individual and communal identity in transcultural contexts. Three shared assumptions guide these essays: religion plays a dynamic role in the shaping and reshaping of social cultures; women are active participants in their transmission and their transformation; and a focus on women's activities within their religious traditions often informal and unofficial, provides new perspectives on the intersection of religion, gender and transnationalism. Since the first European migrations, Canada has been shaped by immigrant communities as they negotiated the tension between preserving their religious and cultural traditions and embracing the new opportunities in their adopted homeland, viewing those interactions through the lens of women's religiosity. The essays in this collection model an innovative approach and provide new perspectives for students and researchers of Canadian studies, religious studies and women's studies.
