this book explains how religious politics repressive institutions and leaders political strategies intersected in the us global war on terror first published in 2004 routledge is an imprint of taylor francis an informa company there has been much scholarly debate on the politically disruptive capabilities of islam and the threats to global security posed by or to muslim states and societies but within this dialogue there has been little recognition of the role of population policies in security issues katrina riddell s study focuses specifically on islam and the securitization of population policies and sustainability opening with a discussion of contemporary population discourses and their historical foundations the book examines how population growth has become an international security issue the author takes the examples of pakistan and iran to provide a nuanced understanding of muslim states interaction with global debates on sustainability she also explores how muslim and non muslim states societies and agents perceive issues of population growth and control providing an innovative approach to the pursuit of global sustainability and security this book presents useful material to scholars whose research focuses on islam and the future this volume the second in the asia society s asian agenda series is designed to foster increased american understanding of islam s role in contemporary asian politics and society during the last decade westerners have tended to view the muslim world as a unified threatening force because of various crises in the middle east the author asserts that while islam has provided asian society with an underlying unity in fundamental belief and practice its interaction with diverse cultures has resulted in muslim states with distinctive differences co published with the asia society examining the theoretical problems which arose when the modern european ideology of nationalism was adopted by muslim societies organized into formally modern states this book first published in 1987 also deals with the practical difficulties arising from the doctrinal incompatibility between islam and the non muslim concept of the territorial nation state it illustrates this conflict with a consideration of the record of several states in the islamic world it suggests that whereas the state an organization of power has been a most durable institution in islamic history the legitimacy of the nation state has always been challenged in favour of the wide islamic nation the umma which comprises all the faithful without reference to territorial boundaries to this extent too the more recent conception of arab nationalism projects a far larger nation state than the existing territorial states in the arab world today this title will be of interest to students of middle eastern studies this book examines the relationship between religion and the state in a comparative perspective with special attention paid to the western and middle eastern experiences it examines the resurgence of fundamentalism not only in developing nations but also in economically affluent post modern societies it seeks to elucidate whether the fusion between religion and politics is compatible with tolerance and individual freedom or whether the jeffersonian wall of separation is necessary to insure the flowering of democracy this ethnography of immigrant muslims examines five northeastern communities providing an intimate look at what it means to be a practicing muslim in america at a time when islam is in the forefront of international news the history of religions in contemporary africa is not just history it is in fact political history this theme of the religious metaphor in the engagement of power relations is impressively illuminated in this thoroughly researched collection of essays on religion state and society in contemporary africa based on a reading of classical islamic literature the writings of modem muslims and on extensive travel and interviews this book discusses ways in which muslim peoples adapt themselves to a world composed of sovereign nation states having peaceful and equal relations with both non muslim states and collectivities of other muslims the classical and medieval legal theory of islam appears to place two obstacles in the way of such adaptations it divides the world into two areas muslim and non muslim between which relations can at best be those of truce and it demands that the life of societies should be regulated by the will of god as revealed in the qu ran not by the will of rulers or of the people dr piscatori shows that the traditional theory provides for some degree of territorial pluralism which has been clearly reflected in the historical experience whereby stable nation states have emerged and become part of the international order
