The special mission of Assessment in the Classroom is to show how assessment principles apply to the full range of teacher decision making, from organizing the class as a social system to planning and conducting instruction to the formal evaluation of learning, and finally to grading. The goal is to show students that assessment is an everyday, ongoing part of their teaching, not some esoteric affair that is divorced from their daily routine. With this in mind, the following features have been built into this text:

Airasian presents complex concepts clearly so that pre-service teachers can understand them and solidly grounds these concepts in best practice through practical, real-world, well-integrated examples. He talks to, not at, users. The text conceives of classroom assessment in a broader way than many other texts; it focuses not only on the assessment needs of testing, grading, interpreting, standardized tests, and performance assessments but also on assessment concerns in organizing a classroom at the start of school, planning and implementing instruction, and strategies of teacher self-reflection. It views classroom assessment as an everyday, ongoing, integral part of teaching, not something that is separated from life in classrooms. The text is organized in a manner that follows the natural progression of teacher decision making, from organizing the class as a learning community to planning and conducting instruction to the formal evaluation of learning, and finally to grading.

Assessment and Grading in Classrooms is particularly geared to the needs of classroom teachers, emphasizing sound approaches to gathering both formative and summative information about student achievement of classroom learning targets, interpreting standardized tests for classroom purposes and using information from multiple sources to help students learn classroom examples and stories breathe life into the concepts presented in the text
