the decoration of houses a manual of interior design written by edith wharton with architect ogden codman was first published in 1897 in the book the authors denounce victorian style interior decoration and interior design especially rooms decorated with heavy window curtains victorian bric a brac and overstuffed furniture they argue that such rooms emphasize upholstery at the expense of proper space planning and architectural design and are therefore uncomfortable and rarely used wharton and codman advocated the creation of houses with rooms decorated with strong architectural wall and ceiling treatments accentuated by well suited furniture rooms based on simple classical design principles such as symmetry and proportion and a sense of architectural balance the decoration of houses is considered a seminal work and its success led to the emergence of professional decorators working in the manner advocated by its authors most notably elsie de wolfe the book was reprinted by the mount and rizzoli and in a hardcover facsimile in 2007

rubens s nine paintings in the ceiling of the banqueting hall in whitehall london provided the main decoration of this magnificent room which was the focal point of stuart court ceremonial commissioned by king james i and his son the future charles i following the destruction of the early jacobean banqueting hall their role in enhancing court spectacle came to an end with the fire that destroyed the rest of whitehall palace in 1598 the delay in executing the commission was due to matters of state in which rubens was involved as a diplomat his stay in london in this capacity in 1629 30 made possible the realization of this commission rubens would have been aware that the stuart s owed their position to the regal union of the crowns of england and scotland that his royal patron had now embraced his father s pacific policy and that he was the more determined to impose an absolute rule which his father had eloquently expounded in speeches ad treatises these three themes form the central core of the cycle which glorified the reign of the late king james i the cycle presented rubens with a great challenge not only because of the novelty of the subject matter but also because of the formal problems presented by the huge scale of the work this volume of the corpus rubenianum ludwig burchard provides the fullest review to date of the history of the commission it also unravels the complex preparatory work and places the subject matter in the context of early stuart political and ethical aspirations
