many U.S. Christians were profoundly moved by the liberation struggles in Central America in the 1980s. Most learned about the situation from missionaries who had worked in the area and witnessed the repression firsthand. These missionaries, like Sharon Erickson Nepstad, shows employed the institutional and cultural resources of Christianity to seize the attention of American congregations and remind them of the moral obligations of their faith. Drawing on archival data and in-depth interviews with activists in ten separate solidarity organizations around the country, Nepstad offers a rich analysis of the experiences of religious leaders and church members in the solidarity movement. She explores the moral meaning of protest and the ways in which clergy used religious rituals, martyr stories, and biblical teachings to establish a link between faith and activism. She looks at the factors that transformed missionaries into skilled leaders who were able to translate the Central American conflicts into Christian themes and a religious language familiar to U.S. congregations. She also offers insights into the unique challenges of organizing on the transnational level and shows how the solidarity movement made U.S. policy towards Central America one of the most hotly contested issues in American politics during the 1980s. Unpacking the implications of her study for the field of collective action, Nepstad stresses the importance of the individual human agents who shape and are shaped by the structures and cultures in which they operate. She argues that working in and through the church gave supporters of solidarity moral credibility as well as a rich source of symbolic human and material resources that enabled them to reach across national borders, motivating others to act upon their deeply held moral convictions. Shedding new light on the genesis and evolution of this important activist movement, Convictions of the Soul will be of interest to students and scholars of social movements, religion, and politics.

What exactly is a living church? Author John Stott explains we need more radically conservative churches. Conservative in the sense that they conserve what scripture plainly requires but radical in relation to that combination of tradition and convention that we call culture. Scripture is unchangeable but culture is not. The living church brings together a number of characteristics of what the author calls authentic or living church. The marks being clearly biblical are timeless and need to be preserved. We are encouraged to become learning churches caring churches worshipping churches and evangelising churches john stott unpacks the bible s wisdom rigorously with a teacher s skill and applies it faithfully with a pastor s heart becoming a living church is not an impossible goal the primary focus of this volume is to bring to the fore the contribution of mcclendon and smith s work on convictions and the application of that work in helping understand the processes of moral reasoning in the context of conflict both were indebted to zuurdeeg and their concept was incorporated in models of moral reasoning by baptist scholars glen stassen and parush parushev the usefulness of the concept is critically evaluated the volume concludes with a case study on the conflict in northern ireland including the role of religion and the key issues raised in the referendum on the belfast agreement in 1998 it includes an examination of the contribution of four christian groups in northern ireland who publicly engaged in this six week period of intense and passionate debate on the agreement and the difficult issues it addressed as the focus for examining and testing the application of the model of moral reasoning on the basis of the case study is demonstrated that the concept of convictions can prove to be a helpful means of getting to the heart of what drives moral reasoning in contexts of conflict the purpose of this book is to issue a call to engage with critique and consider the importance and application of a much undervalued methodological approach to discerning the convictions that are the primary influencers of thought and action
